

QAA at 25 - What is Quality?

Programme

#QAA25

To mark QAA's 25th anniversary in 2022, QAA invites you to join us in a conversation about what is quality. Throughout the year there will be a series of thought-provoking articles, conversations, speeches and debates in which we will explore the many aspects of quality.

Programme
Monday 14 March	Defining Quality Our conversation began with an analysis of what defines quality across the UK's diverse higher education landscape by QAA's CEO Vicki Stott, which was published by on the Higher Education Policy Institute (HEPI) website.
Thursday 21 April	Academic credit: The ticket to a high -quality , flexible learning journey In this podcast, an expert panel explores the role that academic credit can play in facilitating high-quality, flexible learning journeys. It is hosted by Professor Sue Rigby, Vice-Chancellor of Bath Spa University and QAA Board Member, who previously chaired the review of the Credit Framework for England. Sue is joined by Professor Ruth Whittaker, Pro-Vice-Chancellor (Education and Students) at the University of Brighton, who is currently

Reassessing assessment: Getting our approach to assessment right

In an era of change, we recognise the urgency for higher education providers to review their assessment strategy to ensure it is supporting student success, sustainable and securing the academic standards of awards.

In the first live debate of QAA at 25, we brought together a panel of experts to consider how the design and delivery of assessment enhances students' experience of the quality of their higher education.

Our panel was chaired by Nic Beech, Vice-Chancellor, Middlesex University and comprised Professor Mariann Rand-Weaver, Vice-Provost for Education, Brunel University; Professor Sally Brown, Professor Emerita of HE Diversity in Teaching & Learning, Leeds Beckett University; Professor Clare Peddie, Vice-Principal Esecuririicend.6 (a)w-6 (i)2.2 (e)]TJ 0 Tc 3.880.717 0 Td
